

Unique Opportunities For Chinese Students

1+2+1 Program

The University of North Texas joined in the Sino-American CHEPD 1+2+1 Undergraduate Transfer Program in 2013. There are many majors offered in Business, Arts & Sciences, Engineering, and Merchandising & Hospitality Management. More majors are added every year. Starting in 2016, UNT opens some graduate programs to the 121 graduate students. Please check our website for the complete list of the majors at <http://china121.unt.edu/>. Since In 2013, UNT has received more than 40 students from 24 participating Chinese universities. The 121 students are very successful at UNT and two of them received the general academic scholarship granting in-state tuition and $1000 stipend. Our first 121 graduate was accepted to Northwestern University for her graduate study. UNT welcomes all the freshman or sophomore students and graduate students to apply to UNT through the 1+2+1 program beginning in November every year. The application usually ends in March. The accepted students will spend two to three years of study at UNT then return to China for a final year at their original universities. Upon completion of UNT course requirements, students will receive a degree from the University of North Texas and will be also eligible to receive a degree from their Chinese universities according to the requirements of those universities. The various services will be provided to help students to settle in at UNT.
